Top 100 Prospects for Pitch Decks, Presentation Design & Sales Collateral

A working directory of 100 organisations with a live, dated reason to buy presentation design - plus the playbook for turning that reason into a reply.

The one principle everything here rests on

Every prospect is on this list because of a dated, public, verifiable event - a job posting, a funding round, a dropped sponsorship, a published prospectus. That event is your first line. Never open with what you do. Open with what happened to them.

How the 100 break down

Segments are ordered by how little convincing each one requires, so your effort follows conversion likelihood rather than list order.

| Seg   | Segment                                 | Count | Why they're on the list                                                            | Conversion          |
|-------|-----------------------------------------|-------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------|
| A     | Active hiring signal                    | 14    | Posted a job for a presentation or proposal designer. Budget approved.             | Highest             |
| B     | Agencies & studios for white-label work | 21    | Their product is decks. They subcontract overflow. Recurring.               | Highest volume      |
| C     | Recently funded startups                | 31    | Raised Jul-Aug 2026. Cash banked, sales motion starting.                           | Medium-high         |
| D     | VCs, accelerators & fund managers       | 10    | Buy LP decks themselves and refer their whole portfolio.                    | Medium, huge upside |
| E     | Events, conferences & associations      | 10    | Publish a sponsorship prospectus every single year.                                | Medium              |
| F     | Sports & esports properties             | 9     | Sponsorship decks are their revenue engine. Several just lost a partner programme. | Medium-high         |
| G     | Nonprofits & foundations                | 5     | Annual and impact reports on a fixed annual cycle.                                 | Medium              |
| Total |                                         | 100   |                                                                                    |                     |

Read this before you send anything

- Job postings expire. Segment A triggers were live 10-18 August 2026. Re-check the posting is still up before referencing it. If it is filled, switch to the overflow angle.
- No individual LinkedIn profile was verified. Named people appear only where a public source names them. Everywhere else you get the job title to target - search that title plus the company and you will land on the right person.
- Funding figures are as reported. Amounts occasionally get restated. Never quote a number you have not re-read that morning.

- Segment C moves fast. A seed round announced in August is a hot lead in September and a cold one by December. Work it first.

PART 1 The Outreach Playbook

How to work the list so the reply you get is the one you expect.

1. The core principle

Every prospect here is attached to a dated, public, verifiable event. Leading with that event does three things at once: it proves you did homework, it explains why you are writing today, and it makes the message impossible to confuse with the fifty other "I design pitch decks" notes they got this week.

|   | Don't write this                                                | Write this instead                                                                                                        |
|---|-----------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| A | "Hi, I'm a presentation designer with 6 years of experience..." | "Saw you posted a Presentation Designer role in Boston on the 12th - four days on-site is a tough ask for that skillset." |
| C | "I can help you with your pitch deck."                          | "Congrats on the $8M from Square Peg. The first thing that usually breaks after a seed is the sales deck."               |
| B | "Do you outsource design work?"                                 | "You've got 5,000 decks shipped and a San Diego studio - do you keep a freelance bench for overflow weeks?"               |

2. Work the segments in this order

Effort follows conversion. Do not start at prospect 1 and grind to 100.

| Timing   | Segment                                         | Why now                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|----------|-------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Week 1-2 | B agencies, then A hiring signals | Nobody here needs selling on the category. Segment B especially: a bench placement sends you work for years without another cold message. Contact all 21 in Segment B in the first fortnight. |
| Week 3-4 | D VCs & accelerators                     | Low volume, enormous leverage. You are not selling a fund a deck - you are asking to be the designer it recommends.                                                                                  |
| Week 5-8 | C funded startups                        | High volume, medium conversion, fastest cash. Time-sensitive: hit them inside 6 weeks of the announcement.                                                                                           |
| Ongoing  | E, F, G                                  | Calendar-driven. Diary these rather than blitzing them - conferences buy 9-12 months ahead, nonprofits at fiscal year-end, sports before the season sales cycle.                                     |

3. What each segment actually buys

Match the offer to the segment or the reply rate collapses.

| Seg | What they need                                                                                 | What NOT to lead with                                                          |
|-----|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| A   | Overflow capacity, peak-week support, template systems, the work the new hire can't get to yet | Don't pitch as a replacement for the role - the hiring manager will ignore you |

| Seg | What they need                                                                                   | What NOT to lead with                                                          |
|-----|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| B   | White-label production capacity, fast turnaround, working invisibly in their brand and process   | Don't pitch strategy or narrative - that's their margin, you're threatening it |
| C   | Sales deck, one-pager, investor-update template, conference collateral, data viz for new metrics | Don't pitch a pitch deck - they just finished raising                          |
| D   | LP decks for the fund itself, portfolio deck support, demo-day templates                         | Don't ask for a referral in message one                                        |
| E   | Sponsorship prospectus, exhibitor brochure, floorplan graphics, post-event impact report         | Don't pitch in the 6 weeks before their event - nobody is listening            |
| F   | Sponsorship sales decks, partnership one-pagers, audience data viz, renewal recap decks          | Don't pitch generic brand design - they buy revenue collateral                 |
| G   | Annual report, impact report, case for support, donor and board decks, data viz                  | Don't lead on price - lead on donor trust and clarity                          |

The single most important nuance

A company that just closed a round does not want a pitch deck. It wants the collateral that turns money into revenue - sales decks, one-pagers, data visualisation. Pitch-deck work comes from companies 12-18 months post-raise or currently raising. Get this backwards and Segment C will not reply.

4. Message templates

4.1 LinkedIn connection note

Maximum 300 characters - that is the hard constraint. Trigger, one specific observation, no ask.

|                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Segment A | "Saw the Presentation Designer opening in Boston. Pursuit decks under an RFP deadline are a different animal from marketing slides - happy to be a backstop for peak weeks while you hire. No pitch, just leaving it here." |
| Segment B | "5,000+ decks and a San Diego studio - that's serious throughput. Do you run a freelance bench for overflow? I do production-grade PowerPoint in someone else's brand system without needing hand-holding."                 |
| Segment C | "Congrats on the seed. Usually the week after a raise is when someone notices the sales deck is still the fundraising deck with the ask slide deleted. If that's on your list, I'm around."                                 |
| Segment D | "Pre-seed founders lose more deals to a confusing deck than a weak business. I'd happily do a free teardown on one portfolio deck - useful to you either way, no strings."                                                  |
| Segment F | "Noticed you're out of the 2026 partner programme. Rebuilding a sponsorship story for non-endemic brands is exactly the deck problem I like. Worth a look at your current sales deck?"                                      |

4.2 Email - first touch

Four sentences. No attachments. One link.

Subject: <specific trigger, no adjectives>

Hi <name>,

<Trigger - one sentence, dated, factual.>

<One sentence of insight that shows you understand their situation, not your service.>

<What you'd do - concrete, scoped, small.>

Portfolio: <link>. Worth 15 minutes?

Fareed

Worked example - Segment C, using prospect 53

Subject: Congrats on the $8M - one thought on what comes next

Hi Luke,

Saw Reservoir closed $8M on the 12th, led by Asymmetric.

The Boston-metro expansion means your install crews and utility partners will need something to leave behind, and a homeowner-facing one-pager is a very different document from the deck that raised the round.

I'd start with two things: a partner/utility deck and a single-page installer leave-behind, in your existing brand. Fixed price, about a week.

Portfolio: <link>. Worth 15 minutes?

Fareed

4.3 Follow-up cadence

| Touch | Day | Channel                   | Content                                                                      |
|-------|-----|---------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1     | 0   | LinkedIn connect + note   | Trigger, no ask                                                              |
| 2     | +3  | Email                     | Full first touch (4.2 above)                                                 |
| 3     | +8  | LinkedIn DM, if connected | One piece of specific value - e.g. a redesigned slide from their public deck |
| 4     | +17 | Email                     | One line: "Still worth a look, or should I close the loop?"                  |
| 5     | +45 | Email                     | New trigger only. If there is no new trigger, don't send.                    |

Stop at five. Then move them to a quarterly re-trigger list. Follow-ups are not new outreach - budget separate time for them or the cadence silently collapses.

5. The move that converts best

For Segments C, F and G: do the work first, uninvited, and small.

Find one slide of theirs that is publicly available - a deck on their site, a conference talk, a sponsorship page, an annual report spread - rebuild one slide, and send it as an image in message 3. Not a full deck. One slide.

Why it works

It costs 25 minutes and converts several times better than any written pitch, because it moves the conversation from "can you design?" to "can you do this for the other 19 slides?" - a scoping question, not a trust question.

6. Pricing anchors

Use these to sanity-check what you quote. You are competing against these numbers, not against nothing.

| Benchmark                                          | Rate                                        | Source context                  |
|----------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| US in-house presentation designer                  | $42.86/hr average ($31.97-$45.43) | ZipRecruiter, Aug 2026          |
| Suffolk - salaried Presentation Designer, Boston   | $78,000-$106,000/yr                | Job posting, Aug 2026           |
| Allied Sports - Presentation & Brand Designer, NYC | $75,000-$85,000/yr                 | Job posting, Aug 2026           |
| Freelance presentation designer, open market       | $24-$240/hr                        | ZipRecruiter listings, Aug 2026 |
| Nonprofit graphic designer                         | $26.90/hr average ($19.95-$31.25) | ZipRecruiter, Aug 2026          |
| ManyPixels - dedicated designer                    | from $1,299/mo                      | Vendor pricing, 2026            |
| Design Pickle                                      | ~$1,918/mo min + $119-299 platform | Vendor pricing, 2026            |

| Benchmark              | Rate        | Source context       |
|------------------------|-------------|----------------------|
| Superside - enterprise | ~$5,000/mo | Vendor pricing, 2026 |

What this tells you

- A salaried in-house designer costs an employer roughly $6,500-$8,800 a month all-in before overhead. Any retainer below that is defensible on pure economics - say so explicitly to Segment A.
- The subscription studios have set the market's mental anchor at $1,300-$5,000 a month for a designer on tap. Price a retainer inside that band and you land in a familiar, pre-approved-feeling range.
- Never quote hourly to Segment B agencies. They resell your time - quote per slide or per deck so their margin maths is easy.

7. Qualifying - who to drop fast

- They ask for spec work - a free sample deck for their actual project - before any call.
- They want unlimited revisions without a scope document.
- The budget conversation gets deferred twice.
- Segment C only: they raised pre-seed under roughly $500k. There is usually no design budget yet - put them on the 12-month re-trigger list instead of writing them off.

8. Objection handling

| They say                         | You say                                                                                                                                                    |
|----------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "We have someone in-house."      | "Perfect - I'm not trying to replace them. I'm the person they call in the week three decks are due at once." Especially true for Segment A.               |
| "We use Canva / an AI tool now." | "Those are great for volume. They're weak on the one deck that decides an outcome - the board deck, the investor deck, the pitch you can't lose."          |
| "Send us your rates."            | Don't send a rate card cold. "Rates depend on slide count and whether narrative is in scope - give me the deck and deadline and I'll price it in an hour." |
| "Too expensive."                 | Anchor to the in-house cost in section 6, or reduce scope - never rate. Cutting your rate teaches them your first number was fiction.                      |
| "Not right now."                 | "Understood. When's your next raise / conference / annual report?" Then diary it. That is a warm lead in four months, not a dead one.                      |

9. Weekly working rhythm

- 20 new prospects contacted per week (message 1 only). The list is 100, so five weeks of new outreach.
- Follow-ups are not new outreach. Budget separate time or the cadence in 4.3 collapses.
- Re-verify every trigger the morning you send it. A closed job posting or a restated funding number is the fastest way to lose credibility in one sentence.
- Log every reply, including no. A "no, not now" with a date attached is the most valuable row in your CRM.

PART 2 The Prospect Directory

All 100 prospects, grouped by segment. Every row carries a dated buying trigger, what to sell, and the job title to search on LinkedIn.

Reading the table

Contact is the job title to search on LinkedIn alongside the company name - named individuals appear only where a public source names them. P is priority: HIGH contact this week, MED contact this month, LOW diary it. Rows numbered 76b, 93b and so on are grouped organisations that share one identical trigger and one identical pitch, expanded here for CRM use - which is why the directory runs to 105 rows for 100 prospects.

Active hiring signal

14 prospects | 14 directory rows

Why they're here

Each of these organisations posted a job for someone to make presentations, proposals or pursuit graphics. The need is proven, the budget line exists, and nobody has to be convinced the work is worth paying for. You compete on who, not whether.

How to pitch them

Do NOT position yourself as an alternative to the hire - the hiring manager owns that requisition and reads it as a threat. Position as overflow and peak-week capacity. If the role has since been filled the angle gets stronger, not weaker: the new hire is drowning in month one.

Agencies &amp; studios for white-label work

Why they're here

These businesses sell decks. Their constraint is production capacity, not demand. They already brief external designers, they already have clients, and they pay without you educating anyone. One agency that adds you to its bench replaces months of cold outreach.

How to pitch them

Lead with capacity, reliability and brand discipline - your ability to work inside their templates, their client's brand and their deadlines, invisibly. Never pitch narrative or strategy: that is the margin they sell. Price per slide or per deck, never hourly.

Why they're here

Raised July-August 2026. Cash in the bank, sales motion starting, and a board that now expects a monthly update deck with real data in it.

How to pitch them

A company that just closed a round does NOT need a pitch deck - they finished that job. Sell what breaks after a raise: sales decks, one-pagers, investor-update templates, conference collateral, data visualisation. Contact within 6 weeks. Save the pitch-deck angle for the 12-18 month re-trigger.

D

VCs, accelerators &amp; fund managers

10 prospects | 11 directory rows

Why they're here

Two revenue lines from one contact. The firm needs LP decks and demo-day templates; more importantly a pre-seed partner speaks to dozens of founders a month and every one of them needs a deck.

How to pitch them

Never ask for a referral in message one - it reads as extractive. Lead by giving: offer a free teardown of one portfolio company's public deck. Useful to them either way, and it demonstrates judgement rather than claiming it.

Why they're here

Every one of these publishes a sponsorship prospectus and exhibitor brochure every year, because that document is how the event gets funded. Recurring, calendar-driven, already budgeted.

How to pitch them

The 2027 prospectus is commissioned 9-12 months before the event - for most of these, now through Q4 2026. Never pitch in the six weeks before an event. Also sell the back end: the post-event sponsor recap deck that decides whether sponsors renew.

Why they're here

The Esports World Cup's Club Partner Programme - $20M a year, six-figure base per club - dropped several major organisations for its 2026 edition. Those clubs just lost a guaranteed revenue line and must replace it with commercial sponsorship.

How to pitch them

Sell revenue documents: sponsorship sales decks, partnership one-pagers, audience and engagement data visualisation, renewal recap decks. Do not pitch generic brand design. Clubs newly added to the programme need activation collateral right now.

Nonprofits &amp; foundations

Why they're here

Annual and impact reports run on a fixed cycle, and the sector has an acknowledged quality problem: nearly four in five nonprofits use an impact report to fundraise, but only 16% say it is very effective.

How to pitch them

That 16% statistic is your entire pitch - quote it verbatim. Pitch foundations and large national organisations, not small local ones: nonprofit design averages $26.90/hr against $42.86/hr in the wider market. Scope by project, never hourly.

PART 3 Priority Worksheet

Every HIGH-priority prospect, pulled out of the directory and ready to work. Print this page and tick them off.

27 prospects to contact this week

Sorted in the order the playbook tells you to work them: agencies and hiring signals first, then everything else.

Where to start on Monday

SlideGenius (row 15) is the single warmest door on the list - publicly hiring PowerPoint designers, explicitly open to remote candidates, applications to resumes@slidegenius.com. It is the one prospect here you can approach through a stated, open front door rather than cold. Send that one first.

PART 4 The 27 Messages

One tailored message set per high-priority prospect, in send order: agencies first, then hiring signals, funded startups, accelerators, events and esports.

Reading each entry

Reach is where to find them - verified emails and pages where they exist, otherwise a LinkedIn people-search that runs the query for you. Pain is the one thing actually broken for them; everything in the message serves it. Note is the LinkedIn connection request, hard-capped at 300 characters. Follow-up goes on day +3, as email or DM.

Two rules that decide whether these work

Never invent urgency. Every deadline below is their calendar - a demo day, a conference date, a sponsorship cycle. Adding fake scarcity marks you as someone with no work. Never offer a pitch deck to Segment C. They just finished raising; that job is done for 12-18 months. Sell what breaks after the round.

15 · SlideGenius

Reach resumes@slidegenius.com — their own stated route for designers · Company page · Target: Creative Director / Talent

THE PAIN

5,000+ decks shipped is a throughput problem wearing a design problem's clothes. The bad weeks aren't empty ones — they're the Thursdays when three enterprise decks land at once and everyone is already booked.

LINKEDIN NOTE (245 / 300 characters)

"You're hiring PowerPoint designers and open to remote, which usually means the queue is winning. I'm the freelance version of that hire: production-grade decks inside your templates and your client's brand, no hand-holding. Worth a test project?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

5,000 decks is a throughput problem disguised as a design problem.

The weeks that hurt aren't the quiet ones. They're the ones where three enterprise decks land on the same Thursday and every designer is already committed.

I'm not pitching to replace anybody. I'm the person you call on that Thursday. I work inside someone else's template and someone else's brand without needing either explained, and I don't return files that need a second pass.

[link] — give me one real deck as a test. If it isn't clean, you've lost nothing.

THE PAIN

With Facebook, UEFA and the BBC on the other side of the table, one loose slide is the only thing anyone remembers. That bar is easy at normal load and brutal in overlap weeks.

LINKEDIN NOTE (221 / 300 characters)

"Facebook, UEFA, the BBC — clients where one loose slide is the whole conversation. That bar is easy to hold at normal load and brutal when three projects overlap. I'm freelance overflow that holds it. Do you keep a bench?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Your client list sets a bar most studios never have to hold. With UEFA or the BBC on the other side of the table, one misaligned slide is the thing that gets remembered.

Holding it is straightforward at normal load. It gets hard the week three projects overlap and the real choice is late or looser.

I'm the third option. I work to a studio's existing system rather than importing my own taste, and I've built decks for exactly that level of audience.

[link] — one paid test deck and you'll know inside a day.

17 • 24Slides

THE PAIN

200+ designers across two continents solves capacity. It does not solve variance — the deck that technically shipped but came back needing a rebuild, which is always the high-stakes one.

LINKEDIN NOTE (238 / 300 characters)

"200+ designers across two continents is a volume machine, and volume's real risk isn't capacity — it's the one deck that comes back needing a rebuild. I'm senior freelance cover for the work you can't afford to send back. Any bench space?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

A distributed model solves capacity. What it can't fully solve is variance — the deck that technically shipped but came back needing to be redone.

It's never the routine one. It's the client's board deck, the investor deck, the one the account is resting on.

I'd like to be where those get routed. Senior, works inside your process and your templates, returns files that don't need a second pass.

[link] — happy to start with one and let it speak.

18 · Ink Narrates

Reach inknarrates.com · Company page · Mumbai · Target: Founder / Design Lead

THE PAIN

Outsourced presentation design is their actual product, so their ceiling is senior capacity, not demand. Junior capacity can be hired. Senior capacity has to be found.

LINKEDIN NOTE (218 / 300 characters)

"Outsourced presentation design is your product, which means your ceiling is senior capacity, not demand. I'd like to be capacity you don't have to train — investor and sales decks, in your system, right the first time."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Your model is being someone else's design team. Good business, one hard constraint: it scales exactly as fast as you can add people who are already good.

Junior capacity you can hire and train. Senior capacity you have to find, and it's usually already busy.

I do investor and sales decks at that level, I work inside an agency's system rather than around it, and I don't need a brief explained twice.

[link]. One project, then you decide.

19 · Superside

Reach careers.superside.com/jobs/creative-presentation-design — a live Creative (Presentation Design) opening · Remote · Target: Talent / Creative Ops

THE PAIN

An open presentation-design role alongside 450+ brands means demand is ahead of supply. Enterprise deck work isn't a creativity problem — it's a discipline problem across time zones.

LINKEDIN NOTE (232 / 300 characters)

"You have a Creative (Presentation Design) role open and 450+ brands to serve — that maths rarely resolves with one hire. I work inside enterprise brand systems remotely, at that bar. Worth a conversation while the role's still open?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

An open presentation-design role next to 450+ brands tells me demand is running ahead of supply. Good problem, still a problem.

Enterprise presentation work is unusual in that the constraint isn't creativity. It's discipline — staying inside a brand system you didn't build, across time zones, without a review loop to catch you.

That's the part I'm good at. Remote, senior, doesn't need the guardrails explained.

[link] — happy to go through your normal process rather than around it.

1 • Suffolk

Reach LinkedIn search: Suffolk Creative Director · Boston · Target: Creative Director / Marketing Director / Proposal Manager

THE PAIN

The brief asks for someone to *think and structure content, not format slides* — the right ask, and exactly why it'll take months to fill. Four days on-site in Boston narrows the pool further. Meanwhile pursuit deadlines don't move.

LINKEDIN NOTE (223 / 300 characters)

"Saw the Presentation Designer role — four days on-site, for work that spikes around pursuit deadlines. Narrow pool, wide problem. I'm remote cover for peak pursuit weeks until the hire lands. No pitch, just leaving it here."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Your posting says the job is to think and structure content, not format slides. That's the right ask — and it's also why the role will take months to fill.

Pursuits don't wait for hiring. Across 17 offices there's a deadline most weeks, and the ones that hurt are where two majors land together.

That's where I'd be useful: remote, fast, and used to turning technical content into something a selection panel can follow in ten minutes.

Not a substitute for the hire. Cover until it lands, overflow afterwards.

2 • Allied Sports

Reach alliedsports.com/careers · Company page · New York · Target: Creative Director / VP Partnership Marketing

THE PAIN

"Sponsor to Storyteller" puts the entire weight on the story, which makes the sponsorship deck the product demo rather than collateral. New business is lumpy and doesn't pause for hiring.

LINKEDIN NOTE (218 / 300 characters)

""Sponsor to Storyteller" puts the whole weight on the story — and the deck is where it lands or doesn't. You're hiring for that seat. Pitches won't pause while you fill it. I'm remote cover for the ones you can't lose."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Your positioning puts everything on the story, which means the sponsorship deck isn't collateral. It's the product demo.

You're hiring a Presentation & Brand Designer for exactly that. Sensible. But new business is lumpy, and the pitches that arrive between now and the hire are the ones that shape the year.

I build sponsorship and partnership decks — the kind where a brand marketer has to see their own campaign inside your idea within three slides.

[link]. Happy to start on a single pitch and let it prove itself.

3 • Oracle

Reach LinkedIn search: Oracle Consumer Insights Analytics director · Denver + remote · Target: Director, Consumer Insights & Analytics / Creative Lead

THE PAIN

Two presentation openings on the insights side says analysis is outrunning the ability to present it. Their own brief names *scalable PowerPoint template systems* — the part everyone underestimates, because a template either survives its first hundred users or quietly falls apart.

LINKEDIN NOTE (236 / 300 characters)

"Your brief asks for scalable PowerPoint template systems — the part everyone underestimates. A template either survives its first hundred users or quietly falls apart, and most fall apart. That's the work I'd want. Worth a conversation?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Two openings for presentation design on the insights side tells the same story twice: the analysis is outrunning the ability to present it.

The line in your brief about scalable template systems is the interesting one. Most decks don't fail at the design stage. They fail the day a hundred people start using the template and it quietly comes apart.

Building one that survives that is a different discipline from making slides look good, and it's the piece I'd want to work on with you.

4 • Momentum Worldwide

Reach LinkedIn search: Momentum Worldwide new business creative director · New York · Target: Creative Director / Head of New Business

THE PAIN

In experiential the idea is rarely the problem. The problem is that the pitch deck gets built at 11pm by people already running live accounts — and clients don't grade on a curve for that.

LINKEDIN NOTE (217 / 300 characters)

"In experiential the idea is rarely the problem. The problem is the pitch deck gets built at 11pm by people already running live accounts. That's how good ideas lose to better-presented ones. I'm freelance pitch cover."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

In experiential, the idea is usually not what loses. What loses is that the pitch deck gets built at 11pm by the people already running live work.

Clients don't grade for that. They compare your deck to the one from the agency that happened to have capacity that week.

I do new-business decks as overflow. You keep the thinking; I make sure the document doesn't lose it on the way to the room.

[link]. One pitch is enough to see whether it helps.

5 • Prophet

Reach LinkedIn search: Prophet design director studio · SF / NYC / Chicago / London · Target: Design Director / Studio Manager

THE PAIN

Consulting has an unfair mechanic — the client can't see the thinking, only the document. So slide quality becomes perceived strategy quality, and the slide is usually made by a strategist after midnight.

LINKEDIN NOTE (221 / 300 characters)

"Clients can't see the thinking, only the document — so slide quality becomes perceived strategy quality. Bad trade when the slide gets made by a strategist at 2am. Freelance deck support, in your system, at your standard."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Consulting has an unfair mechanic built into it: the client can't see the thinking, only the document. So the quality of the slide becomes the perceived quality of the strategy.

Which is a poor trade when the person making the slide is a strategist doing it after midnight because there was nobody else.

I do that layer as freelance capacity — inside your templates, at your standard, so the recommendation lands the way it deserves to.

36 • Bespoke Labs

Reach Co-founders Alex Dimakis and Mahesh Sathiamoorthy · LinkedIn search · San Francisco · $40M Series A, 6 Jul 2026, Wing VC

THE PAIN

The deck that raised the round is now being asked to sell. Different reader, different job — investors buy a future, ML teams buy evidence. And their evidence is benchmarks, which is where technical decks fall apart visually.

LINKEDIN NOTE (204 / 300 characters)

"Congrats on the $40M. The deck that raised it is now being asked to sell — different job, different reader. Investors buy a future; ML teams buy the benchmark. Worth a look at what you're sending out now?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Alex / Mahesh,

Congratulations on the $40M with Wing in July.

The pattern after a Series A is fairly consistent: the fundraising deck gets the ask slide deleted and quietly becomes the sales deck. It rarely works, because investors are buying a future and ML teams are buying evidence.

For what you're building, the evidence is the benchmark — and benchmark slides are where most technical decks come apart.

That's the piece I'd rebuild first. Small scope, fixed price, no commitment beyond it.

38 · Maximum

Reach CEO Randy Fernando · LinkedIn search · Miami · $30M Seed, 3 Aug 2026, CRV

THE PAIN

Replacing a bank core means the buyer is the most risk-averse person in financial services, reading the deck for the reason this becomes their fault. That makes the deck a risk document before it's a product document — and startup decks bury exactly that.

LINKEDIN NOTE (207 / 300 characters)

"$30M to replace bank cores — congratulations. The hard part isn't the technology, it's that your buyer reads a deck looking for the reason this becomes their fault. Worth pressure-testing yours against that?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Randy,

Congratulations on the $30M with CRV — and on doing this a third time.

You'll already know the part that makes this different. A bank buyer isn't really evaluating whether your product is better. They're looking for the reason this becomes their fault.

That makes the sales deck a risk document more than a product document: security, compliance and migration have to be answered before the roadmap gets a hearing.

Most startup decks put those at the back, if at all. I'd start there.

THE PAIN

Expanding beyond retail is a narrative problem before it's a product problem. Retail case studies read to a new-sector buyer as proof you were built for someone else.

LINKEDIN NOTE (212 / 300 characters)

"$9M to take edge AI beyond retail — congrats. The product travels; the deck usually doesn't. Retail proof read by a new sector says "built for someone else." Worth fixing before the first ten meetings, not after?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Congratulations on the $9M.

Moving into a new vertical is a narrative problem before it's a product one. Your retail proof is real — but a buyer in a different sector reads retail case studies as evidence you were built for someone else.

The fix isn't a new deck per industry. It's one architecture where the proof stays put and the framing moves.

That's about two weeks of work, and it is considerably cheaper now than after the first ten conversations go quiet.

THE PAIN

The round is explicitly for moving upmarket. A CISO and a procurement team read a deck completely differently from a mid-market buyer — scanning for risk, evidence and precedent. Decks built for the earlier motion answer the wrong questions in the wrong order.

LINKEDIN NOTE (212 / 300 characters)

"Congrats on the round — and on saying plainly that it's for moving upmarket. A CISO reads a deck for procurement risk, not features. Mid-market decks rarely survive that jump. Worth a look at what you're sending?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Ben,

Congratulations on the round with Northern Gritstone.

Moving upmarket is the stated plan, so you may already be feeling the shift. A CISO and a procurement team read a deck completely differently from a mid-market buyer — scanning for risk, for evidence, and for who else has already done this.

Decks built for the earlier motion rarely survive that transition. Not because they're bad, but because they answer the right questions in the wrong order.

Worth fifteen minutes on what's going out at the moment?

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Congratulations on coming out of stealth. TIME Ventures, Michael Dell, Diane Greene and Aaron Levie is a cap table that does a lot of work for you before you say anything.

It also sets an expectation. Enterprise buyers who hear the name will go looking within the week, and whatever exists at that moment becomes their read on how serious this is.

That window is short and it doesn't reopen. I'd rather help you use it than watch it pass.

THE PAIN

Everything that carried them in Australia — reputation, warm intros, people knowing the founders — resets to zero at the US border. What travels is the document. And their buyer is a robotics engineer, the least marketing-tolerant reader there is.

LINKEDIN NOTE (214 / 300 characters)

"$8M and a move from Sydney to the US — congrats. Reputation and warm intros don't cross the border; the document does. And robotics engineers close anything that reads like marketing. Worth solving before you land?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Congratulations on the $8M with Square Peg.

US expansion out of Australia has a specific problem attached. Everything that carried you at home — reputation, warm intros, people already knowing the founders — resets to zero at the border.

What travels is the document. And your reader is a robotics engineer, which means anything that smells like marketing gets closed in about four seconds.

The version that works for them looks closer to a technical brief with real telemetry in it than a startup pitch. That's what I'd build.

LINKEDIN NOTE (219 / 300 characters)

"~100 units around Boston, then $8M to go much wider. The next thousand get sold by installers and utility partners, not by you — and they need something to leave behind. Cheaper to build before the scale-up than during."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Luke,

Congratulations on the $8M with Asymmetric.

Around a hundred units in the Boston area means most of those conversations still had a founder or an early employee somewhere near them. The next thousand won't. They'll run through installers, utility partners and homeowners who each need a different version of the same argument.

That's three documents, not one: a utility partner deck, an installer leave-behind, and something a homeowner will actually read.

Much cheaper to build now than to retrofit once the crews are already in the field.

THE PAIN

A studio doesn't have a deck problem — it has the same deck problem on repeat, forever. The cost isn't any single deck; it's rebuilding the wheel with every solo founder they back. This is your highest repeat-value prospect in the segment.

LINKEDIN NOTE (211 / 300 characters)

"A studio doesn't have a deck problem — it has the same one on repeat, with every founder, forever. Solving it once as a system beats solving it eleven times. Worth a conversation about how you'd want that built?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Congratulations on the $6M.

Most companies need a deck once or twice a year. A studio needs one every time it launches — so the real cost isn't any single deck, it's rebuilding the wheel with every solo founder you back.

The version that scales is a system: a narrative structure and a design kit each new company inherits on day one, so their first deck starts at good instead of blank.

Built once, used indefinitely. That's the conversation I'd like to have.

LINKEDIN NOTE (222 / 300 characters)

"Congrats on the raise — 250 sensors to 1,000, plus Europe and Brazil. A grower in Bahia won't read a Sydney deck: different crop, different units, someone else's farm. That translation is the unglamorous half of expansion."

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Lewis,

Congratulations on the round, and on the Hort Innovation and GrainCorp backing — that's hard-won credibility in agriculture.

Two things about the next phase are worth separating. Scaling from 250 sensors to 1,000 is an operations problem. Entering Europe and Brazil is a communication one.

Growers are practical buyers. They want the yield case in their own crop, their own language and their own units — and the Australian proof, however strong, reads as someone else's farm.

That's a specific piece of work, and far easier before a season than in the middle of one.

LINKEDIN NOTE (201 / 300 characters)

Hi [name],

Demo Day is 10 September and you get one to two minutes.

At that length nobody is following an argument. They're reading three slides while half-listening, deciding whether to take the meeting.

The failure mode is almost always identical: too much on the slide, and the one number that matters buried in the middle of it.

That's a fixable problem and a short one. Fixed price, done well before the day rather than the night before.

177 emerging-manager funds closed in the year to 2026, the fewest since 2015, and the median US fund is down around $15M. Your cohort is raising into the tightest LP market in a decade.

Most first-time GPs build the LP deck the way they'd build a startup deck: vision first, proof later. Institutional LPs read in the opposite order — track record, thesis discipline, why you, then everything else.

That's a structural fix rather than a design one, and it applies to every manager in the programme.

Happy to do one teardown free so you can see whether it's worth putting in front of them.

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

Sponsorship for April 2027 is open now, which means vendors are allocating over the next few months and will be closed for the year after that.

A prospectus is doing something harder than it looks. It isn't describing the event — it's competing for the same budget line as four other security conferences.

The ones that win read like a business case: audience, proof, and precisely what the sponsor walks away with. The ones that don't read like a rate card with tiers on it.

There's also the piece almost nobody builds — the post-event recap that decides whether they come back. Happy to talk about either.

Selling out is a demand signal, and it usually means the floor was underpriced or under-packaged. The standard response is to reprint last year's prospectus with new dates — which leaves the upside on the table for another twelve months.

LINKEDIN NOTE (229 / 300 characters)

"Congratulations on selling out the 2026 hall. Sold out is usually a pricing signal, not just a good year — and most shows answer it by reprinting last year's prospectus. Worth doing something better before 2027 booths go on sale?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi Andrea,

Congratulations on selling out the 2026 exhibit hall.

Selling out is a demand signal, and it usually means the floor was underpriced or under-packaged. The common response is to reprint last year's prospectus with new dates — which quietly leaves that upside on the table for another year.

The alternative is a 2027 prospectus built to sell up: clearer tiers, a genuine premium option, and the sold-out story used as proof rather than a footnote.

Small project, fairly direct revenue answer. Worth fifteen minutes before booths go on sale?

Hi [name],

The 2026 partner-programme changes moved a guaranteed line into a commercial one, and the brands holding budget now are largely non-endemic.

That changes what the deck has to do. A brand marketer isn't buying trophies or roster history. They're buying a defined audience, attention they can't get cheaper elsewhere, and a campaign they can explain to their own CMO without translating it.

Most esports sales decks are still written for fans. Yours is competing with traditional sports properties for the same money and should read like one.

Happy to rebuild a single section and show you the difference before you commit to anything.

LINKEDIN NOTE (231 / 300 characters)

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

With the 2026 programme changes, more of the revenue now has to come directly from brand partners.

You have the rare thing: a fanbase most properties would pay to borrow. The gap is usually translation — an audience everyone inside esports already understands, presented to a brand marketer in Paris or Munich who needs it in their terms.

In practice that means audience data before roster, campaign mechanics before culture, and a version in each language that reads natively rather than translated.

I'd start with one deck and one one-pager.

"Brazil's biggest esports audience is creator-led — exactly what non-endemic brands are buying, and exactly what most esports decks fail to prove. Fragmented reach shown as a logo wall isn't an audience. Worth a look at yours?"

FOLLOW-UP (day +3, email or DM)

Hi [name],

With the 2026 partner programme reshuffled, the commercial deck is doing more of the work.

LOUD's real asset isn't the roster. It's a creator-led audience with reach most Brazilian media properties can't match — which is precisely what non-endemic brands are buying right now.

The problem is that creator reach is hard to present. It's fragmented across people and platforms, and most decks end up showing it as a logo wall instead of an audience.

Turning that into one clear picture, in Portuguese and English, is the job. Happy to do a section as proof.
